

ANNA STEWART MEMORIAL PROGRAM

Anna Stewart was an inspiration for women to be actively involved in the union movement, as a long time campaigner for women's rights. After she died the Anna Stewart program was established in 1983 as a tribute to her outstanding work and an opportunity to provide an annual work experience program aimed at increasing women's union activism and raising the acceptance and understanding of women's issues.

Background

The program enables participants to see how Unions organise. It also provides the opportunity to become involved & participate in Unions Tasmania and why unions are so critical for women.

Objectives

- To facilitate greater involvement of women in the trade union movement and unions.
- To encourage the integration of women into union structures by increasing the opportunity for involvement in those structures.
- To promote greater awareness within unions of the particular needs of female members and the important contribution women can make to the development and growth of unions.
- To promote women’s understanding of the day-to-day operations of the unions.
